Guy "Pete" Emery of Concord, N. H., said here, Tuesday. He came Monday on account of the illness of his mother.

"Pete" was accompanied by his brother-in-law, Bob Lindstrom, also of Concord. Speaking about highways he said the road through Portland was bad, but via Gorham, N. H., proved rough.

W. H. Edminster, superintendent of schools, said: "Parties representing themselves as instructors of various musical instruments, have been canvassing the town for pupils, representing that they have the backing of the school department. These musical parties are unimpaired to me and are not sponsored by the school department in any way."

Don C. Seitz: "The debacle of The World has made me sick. . . . The tragedy has evoked wide and bitter feelings of regret. Barrett got nearly $200,000, but pledged to the newspaper, but Seitz had a contract contingent only on the surrogate's consent to break the will. There was no excuse for failure. . . . But enough. The dog is dead."

North Paris Reporter.

With the snow melting and the stove leagues disbanding, baseball is expected to be the conversation around the pool room, bowling alley, barber shops and Shorty's lunch room. At this time the sentiment is favorable for a town team in the Pine Tree League.

The financial year last summer will be the death knell of the league, yet that remains to be seen. Norway will be reasonably sure of the Rattlers and the Ward S Tigers and they are a pair of aces.

Sent in: It was very gratifying that O'Grady's Grove was accepted without a dissenting voice, and some who appreciate the beautiful thing that Mr. Seitz has done in saving the grove, would like to see this named "The Don Seitz Bird Sanctuary." Between these words all read that this would be a safe name for people, birds and squirrels, and there would be no fear of men and boys with guns. Let's honor Mr. Seitz and show him we appreciate what he has done.

Fred I. Farwell of Somerville, Mass., says: "See everyone down in Florida this winter. I know what I want. . . . Well, when I was a kid at Bethel the 'wills' used to call the spool and dovel stick 'squares'. Called, no doubt, because it was saved in square lengths. That's that, but the other name I have 'ave to be answered by the New York correspondent. Suppose town report rush over and you can find time to inspect our lines and other necessary equipment to be ready for Moschese. Wish you best of luck."

Sent in: Here is something from an ancient history. Times and seasons have changed since Julius Caesar et al wrote in classic Latin, but fish stories never get away from the ancient rule of ratio and proportion. We submit this story:

"A curious way of fishing among the Romans and Greeks of 2,000 years ago was for a riverside fisherman to wonder along the bank of a river with a pair of scales in tow. Coming to a likely spot, he would toss into the river a long rope or line on the end of which would be a large, sharp hook baited with meat. Warned by the line's jerking, a large fish was on the hook, the fisherman would start up his ozen, tied to the line, and there would ensue a tug-of-war between the monster fish and the ozen.

Osman W. Brown of the Boston Herald was elected first vice president of the year (Mar.) Press Club at the annual meeting held the past week, and was also given a rising vote of thanks for publicity work which he secured over the radio and by the printed word for the organization during the past year. The club, whose membership is confined entirely to writers in editorial rooms of Lynn newspapers or who represent Boston newspapers, has about 75 members, and a treasury of more than $5,000. The club's treasury, sick and death benefits are paid, and financial aid given to members if in need. The club also officially opens the summer season on the North Shore by sponsoring a series of frolics, dance and vaudeville show at the New Ocean House in Swampscott, this year's event being scheduled for the evening of May 22.

There was held in Community Hall one of the finest noon day luncheons that has been served in this town. The menu was the main dish served, although there was a delicious serving of well baked beans and red hot brown bread. Lemon, squash, apple and custard pies were in evidence. The menu was a picnic and homemade bread were a part of the menu and a very large crowd of folks came to enjoy the repast.

A splendid morning address was given by the Methodist pastor, whose theme was "Does God Create Evil?" Mr. Ly. on pointed out the text in Isaiah where God claimed to be responsible for evil; also to place in the New Testament, where we are told to pray thus, "and deliver us from evil." These two texts were presented to the people and the minister's disputation of them were impressively recited. The male quartet sang a beautiful selection and Rupert Aldrich rendered an appealing solo. In the evening there was an unusual service of intercession, the mixed quartet sang a beautiful selection and Rupert Aldrich rendered an appealing solo.
